Planting trees for depollution of air and water

हवा और पानी की दूढ़ता के लिए

वृक्षारोपण

It is your generation that must make us be accountable to make sure that we don't betray the future of humankind.

—United Nations Secretary-General, António Guterres

To depollute the air, we have determined to plant trees to the possible extent. It is very much beneficial for the human race and our future generation. Apart from this, planting trees also has heavenly reward. I appeal to the every unit of Jamiat Youth club to plant at least 1000 trees in their region.

—Maulana Mahmood Madani

Human activities, such as the use of fossil fuels, deforestation and unsustainable agriculture contribute to climate change, which decreases the availability of nutritious food and clean water, and destroys ecosystems and secure living environments. This leads to malnutrition, ill health and migration, rendering youth particularly vulnerable. At the same time, youth constitute the majority of the population in many countries and have an increasingly strong social and environmental awareness, which has the power to transform our societies towards a low-carbon and climate resilient future.

Points of resolutions

Passed by the JUH national governing body meeting held at Deoband on May 28,29, 2022

- (1) Ensure self-hygiene, cleaning of house and its surrounding areas as a part of your individual and collective responsibilities.
- (2) Imams of mosques, speakers and influential people should spread the message that filth is not just filth it is the root cause of thousands of epidemics.
- (3) Oxygen Park and large number of tree planting is most important instruments to avoid air pollution. In the same way, water is a beautiful gift of nature to which the life of all creatures including human race is associated. That is why we need to look at how we can avoid wasting water throughout our lives. Especially the religious institutions that present themselves as ideals should adopt a system in mosques and places of worship that does not waste water unnecessarily.

The world is home to 1.8 billion young people between the ages of 10 to 24 — the largest generation of youth in history. Young people are increasingly aware of the challenges and risks presented by the climate crisis and of the opportunity to achieve sustainable development brought by a solution to climate change.

Young people are not only victims of climate change. They are also valuable contributors to climate action. They are agents of change, entrepreneurs and innovators. Whether through education, science or technology, young people are scaling up their efforts and using their skills to accelerate climate action. My generation has largely failed until now to preserve both justice in the world and to preserve the planet.
