Message to youth

Dear Youth,

In a world where diversity and understanding are increasingly celebrated, one vital aspect we must continually address is the respect and empowerment of women. As the torchbearers of the future, you, the youth, possess the power to shape society's narrative and bring about positive change. Today, we urge you to join hands and foster a culture of respect towards women, recognizing them as equals, capable of achieving greatness in every facet of life. Respecting women goes beyond mere lip service; it demands an active commitment to challenge age-old stereotypes and break down the barriers that have confined them for far too long. It starts with acknowledging that women are not just mothers, daughters, or sisters, but multifaceted individuals with dreams, aspirations, and rights to self-determination. Empowerment is not about giving women power; it is about recognizing the power they already possess and ensuring they have equal opportunities to unleash their potential. As young minds, you have the responsibility to support, encourage, and uplift the women around you –in schools, workplaces, and communities. Embrace diversity and inclusivity as powerful tools that can forge a path towards a more equitable society. Be the generation that champions gender equality. Take the time to educate yourselves and others about the challenges women face daily, empathize with their struggles, and amplify their voices. Remember, respect is not conditional; it is not reserved for a select few. It is a fundamental right that every human being deserves, regardless of gender. Treat women with dignity, kindness, and empathy in your family – just as you would wish to be treated. Stand against any form of discrimination or harassment, and be courageous enough to intervene when you witness injustice. Let us build a future where women are not limited by outdated norms but are celebrated for their contributions to society. The world needs the unique perspectives, talents, and leadership that women bring to the table. In conclusion, dear youth, the respect of women is not just an ethical imperative; it is an investment in a brighter and more inclusive future. Be the generation that paves the way for true equality, understanding that when one group is uplifted, we all rise together. With hope and determination, Mahmood. A. Madani, the chief Commissioner.
